Mishandling Campus Rape

Clare Locke LLP

1 Brian Lehrer: Today on the Brian Lehrer Show, the thousands of 2 New Yorkers who took to the streets last night weren't just 3 protesting the death of Michael Brown. We'll talk about the 4 fatal police shooting here in New York last week of Akai Gurley
5 in a public housing stairwell. Commissioner Bratton has called 6 it a tragic accident, an accidental shooting. Protestors aren't 7 buying it. Brooklyn Borough President and former police officer
8 Eric Adams will be our guest. He's calling for a different kind 9 of policing in NYCHA buildings, and we'll talk generally about 10 life after the Ferguson non-indictment with Eric Adams today.
11 Also today, looking for things to talk about at Thanksgiving
12 with your red state relatives? We'll check out Facebook's 13 findings about what popular culture liberals and conservatives
14 both seem to like, for example, Taylor Swift, the Hunger Games, 15 and the Jersey Shore (the place, not the show) are all on the 16 list of things you might talk about to break the ice over 17 Thanksgiving dinner tomorrow. We'll see what else. And we'll 18 share tips for getting to and through LaGuardia, JFK, and Newark 19 Airports.

20 Julia Louis-Dreyfus: They say no one's ever beaten the Van 21 Wyck. But gentlemen, I tell you this: I came as close as anyone 22 ever has!

23 Brian Lehrer: Elaine knows. We'll see what you know coming up 24 later. But first, the big article on campus at Thanksgiving
25 Break is Rolling Stone Magazine's investigation of campus rape,

1 and it's having an impact. The University of Virginia, have you
2 heard this, where the main incident described in the article 3 took place, has suspended all fraternity activity until after 4 Christmas Break. So we will ask how much is frat culture
5 responsible for campus rape? Should UVA ban its frats 6 permanently? And what about other schools? Joining us now is 7 the writer of the Rolling Stone article, Sabrina Rubin Erdely.
8 Sabrina, thank you so much for coming on today. Good morning.
9 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: Good morning. Thank you for having me.
10 Brian Lehrer: And also with us is Jed Rubenfeld, Yale law
11 professor who had an opinion piece in the New York Times last 12 week called "Mishandling Rape." Jed, welcome back to WNYC.
13 Jed Rubenstein: Hi, thanks.
14 Brian Lehrer: And Jed, be patient for a few minutes while we 15 get some of the basics on the table here for listeners who 16 haven't read the Rolling Stone article, and Sabrina, first, I 17 just have to acknowledge out loud the shocking brutality of the 18 fraternity gang rape as you describe it at the top of the 19 article. The poor freshman girl, Jackie, just starting her 20 college career, wooed by a high status junior, as you describe 21 it, and then just raped and raped for three hours by this group 22 of guys. Would you describe some of what you documented for 23 people who didn't read the article?
24 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: Sure. The article begins with a freshman 25 named Jackie who, she was four weeks into her freshman year, she

1 was having the time of her life at University of Virginia, and 2 she had been asked out on a date by this handsome junior, who 3 took her to a fraternity party, and while at this party, he took 4 her upstairs to a bedroom where she said it was pitch black 5 inside, and there were seven men waiting inside who then, for 6 the next three hours, took turns raping her while her date and 7 another man stood by giving the men encouragement and 8 instruction.

9 Brian Lehrer: I mean, this is not your vague circumstances date 10 rape, which is getting most of the attention these days. This 11 is like a thuggish street gang attack. So did you tell this 12 story as a shocking outlier, as a way to shame UVA in 13 particular, or just tell a horrific extreme story, or as an 14 example of something that you think is a larger problem on 15 campuses across the country?

16 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: Well, the reason why her story really 17 stood out is obviously because it was so extreme, but the reason 18 why I used it was because her story, what really shocked me 19 about her story was that her story was treated by her peers and 20 by the administration much like stories of, let's call them 21 "typical" sort or rape allegations, that they were treated, she 22 was kind of brushed off by her friends and by the 23 administration. When she told her friends about it, they either 24 didn't believe her, or they downplayed the situation, they 25 encouraged her not to report it, because they said that it would

1 kill her reputation on campus, and eventually, when she did
2 report it to the administration, the administration did nothing 3 about, they did nothing with the information. And they even 4 continued to do nothing even when she eventually told them that 5 she had become aware of two other women who were also gang raped 6 at the same fraternity. So the idea that

7 [00:05:00]

8 even in a case that was so extreme as Jackie's, that there would 9 be this level of indifference, it really opened up a window into 10 what was really happening on campus with regard to rape cases in 11 general.

12 Brian Lehrer: So if there are any college students listening 13 right now, call up and talk about how much rape, date rape or 14 other kinds, you think there is on your campus, how seriously 15 your school takes it. Conversely, you can talk about the kind 16 of new generation of anti-rape rules, which we'll get into with 17 Jed Rubenfeld in a minute, which he thinks are, in some cases, 18 wrong-headed and may exacerbate the problem in the name of 19 trying to fix it, but college students, first priority, anyone 20 else campus associated, any parents, anyone else at all, (212) 21 433-WNYC, (212)433-9692. Certainly anyone who's read the 22 Rolling Stone article by our guest, which has been going quite 23 viral online, on campus, and around the country in general, 24 (212)433-9692. Let's have some of this discussion. So Sabrina, 25 the UVA president has apparently reacted to your article by

1 suspending all fraternity activity until January. Is that the 2 official response you were hoping for?

3 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: I had no expectations as to what was 4 going to happen. I mean, really, I wasn't expecting it to be 5 this widely read. But I think that it's a first, it's a good
6 first step. I think that people are reacting to it differently, 7 the shutting down of the fraternities for a short time, some 8 people are mistaking it as a slap on the wrist. Other people 9 are kind of celebrating that this is the end of fraternity 10 culture at University of Virginia. I don't think that either is 11 correct. I think that this is just them hitting the pause
12 button appropriately so they can hopefully take some thoughtful 13 steps about what to do next, because I do expect some dramatic 14 changes in the future, but I think it's really important that 15 those changes be thoughtful and not just something that is swift 16 and symbolic.

17 Brian Lehrer: What dramatic changes, as you put it, do you 18 expect?

19 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: Well, that's hard to say. I mean, this 20 is an administration that has a lot of problems, and I should 21 say that this is not uncommon to, this is actually very typical 22 of many colleges, the kinds of things that they have on their 23 plate to fix right now. They have a situation where, it seems 24 to me, fraternities are basically calling the shots at this 25 university, where sexual assault is rampant, where sexual

1 assault survivors are afraid to come forward, where those few 2 people who do come forward to the administration seem to be 3 discouraged from moving their cases forward or from reporting to 4 police, and finally, where perpetrators are very rarely ever 5 punished. So those are a lot of different areas that need to be 6 addressed.

7 Brian Lehrer: And before we bring in Jed Rubenfeld, how much do 8 you think frat culture, rather than UVA culture, rather than 9 alcohol culture, whatever other piece you want to separate out, 10 is at the root of campus rape there, and the ignoring of campus 11 rape there?

12 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: I mean, fraternity culture certainly 13 contributes to the problem of sexual assault, and in the 14 article, I talk a lot about party culture and how that culture 15 can really set the backdrop for sexual assault, and much of the 16 partying at UVA happens at fraternities, which is the case at a 17 lot of schools. Fraternities have become, for some reason, a 18 place where there's a lot of misogyny and a lot of really bad 19 behavior towards women tends to be tolerated as normal, and that 20 has real world impact on their behavior. There are studies that 21 show that fraternity men are three times more likely to commit 22 sexual assault than non-affiliated men. So this is a big 23 problem. I don't know that shutting down fraternities is 24 necessarily the answer, though. I mean, my hope is that 25 fraternities are going to embrace this as an opportunity to turn

1 things around, because I don't think that fraternities have to 2 be places that are drenched in misogyny and rape tolerance. I 3 mean, I'd like to think that that's not an essential part of the 4 fraternity identity. If I'm wrong, then they should be shut
5 down. If degrading women is a key part of their culture, then 6 they've got to go, but I suspect that that doesn't have to be 7 happening, that they don't need to be places that foster 8 misogyny.

9 Brian Lehrer: When did your article come out?

10 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: It came out online on Wednesday. I think 11 it came to newsstands, I don't know, yesterday.

12 Brian Lehrer: Really? So this week. So this is a pretty quick 13 firestorm that your piece has caused, and pretty quick reaction.

14 So Jed Rubenfeld, Yale law professor, your opinion piece in the 15 New York Times,

16 [00:10:00]

17 "Mishandling Rape," came out on the 15th, I see, so before the 18 Rolling Stone article. Have you read Sabrina's piece yet?

19 Jed Rubenstein: No, I haven't. Of course, I've heard and read 20 about the terrible, awful rape that was described in the story.

21 Brian Lehrer: And you portray a campus based system of rape 22 enforcement that winds up both in too many rapists going 23 unpunished and too many innocent men being found guilty of 24 sexual assault in campus proceedings. How can both be true?

25 Jed Rubenstein: Well, let's start with the fundamental problem,

1 which is the appalling numbers of sexual assaults, of rapes
2 happening on college campuses. So about 3 to 4 out of 100 3 college women say that they are actually raped in the kind of 4 way that is being described in the Rolling Stone piece. That is 5 to say, what you are describing as the outlier case, forcible 6 rape. A total of about 10 out of 100, that's 10%, say that they 7 were raped altogether. That includes people having sex with 8 them when they're incapacitated by alcohol or other drugs. This 9 is a heinous, staggering number, 10%, and we are failing the 10 victims of college rape. Here's what's happening. Rapists 11 never go to jail, almost never. Why is that? Well, in part, 12 for very good reasons, the victims of sexual assault do not 13 report to the police. They know that the arrest rates are low, 14 they're afraid they won't be believed, they're afraid that 15 they'll be mistreated, so fewer than 5% of female rape victims 16 from college ever report to the police, and that's in contrast 17 to the nationwide number, where it's more like 35% report to the 18 police. So we have a terrible problem of the criminal justice
19 system failing the victims, female victims especially of college 20 assault, and what are we doing about that? Well, since 2011, 21 the federal government has been insisting that universities 22 prosecute and adjudicate these cases, and that's just not the 23 answer. Colleges are not competent to handle these cases. They 24 are making mistakes. They dismiss rape charges when they 25 shouldn't, and probably, they're finding some people guilty when

1 there was no assault. You're getting the worst of all worlds.

2 Brian Lehrer: Therefore, Jed, more should be referred out to 3 law enforcement when there are charges?

4 Jed Rubenstein: We've got to find a way to bring law 5 enforcement into this. What's happening is, look, there's 6 research that indicates that over 90% of campus rapes are 7 committed by fewer than 4% of college men. So what we have is a 8 problem of serial rapists who get away with it and don't get 9 punished and don't go to jail. And if just a couple, these guys 10 are doing what they're doing, if all that happened just as 11 described in Virginia, they're doing what they're doing with 12 impunity. They know that people don't go to jail for this. If 13 we can send a few of these guys to jail, this will have an 14 enormous effect, because right now, we're not deterring 15 anything. And the other half of the problem is alcohol.
16 There's tons of evidence that rapes on college campuses involve 17 alcohol, and what's happened is, you know, we've done
18 prohibition. We say college kids can't drink until they're 21.
19 Well, of course, that just drives it underground. That just 20 creates this party scene where alcohol, and to some extent, 21 other drugs are available and drawing people to parties that are 22 controlled by men, male-controlled, male-dominated spaces, and 23 that, sad to say, is a recipe for sexual predation. Not long 24 ago, when alcohol could still be sold and consumed by people 18
25 on college campus, there were grown ups and security personnel

1 at large parties who could supervise and monitor. Well, right 2 now, the adults can't be there, because you're not supposed to 3 be aware that anybody's drinking. So we have this really 4 foolish system where the schools are turning a blind eye to the 5 alcohol party scene at frats and other all male clubs, and that 6 is just another incredibly foolish thing. In other words, 7 colleges should focus on prevention. They should do that by,
8 they should not be so foolish about their alcohol regulations, 9 they should not be focusing on adjudication, which they don't do 10 well. In fact, they make mistakes all the time, and here's the 11 real problem: if the college gets it right, and if the college, 12 let's say, expels these guys at Virginia, that is not a 13 punishment that's sufficient to the crime. Even if they got 14 expelled, that leaves them free, that leaves them at large, that 15 leaves them able to commit rapes elsewhere.

16 [00:15:00]

17 That is not the way to deter a crime.

18 Brian Lehrer: Jed Rubenfeld, Yale law professor who wrote the 19 opinion piece you may have seen in the New York Times Sunday 20 Review last week, "Mishandling Rape." Sabrina Erdley from 21 Rolling Stone Magazine, who wrote that piece that's being so 22 widely shared in the last few days about rape and the ignoring 23 of rape at the University of Virginia, which has now almost 24 instantly resulted in the suspension of all fraternity activity 25 there until after Christmas Break, and our board is full of your

1 phone calls. Let's hear from a few people. Sophie in 2 Poughkeepsie, you're on WNYC. Hi, Sophie.

3 Sophie: Hi. I'm a freshman at Vassar College in Poughkeepsie,

4 New York, and I was wondering, coming from a campus that does

5 not have Greek life and is not particularly charged with as much

6 [INDISCERNIBLE] men attitude that comes with fraternities, as to 7 why we think these rapes and allegations of sexual assault are 8 not reported to the police as an emergency call, but rather

9 reported to administration? I mean, this is not something,

10 being caught drinking in your room or smoking in your room.

11 This is rape and sexual assault is a very serious crime. And so

12 I was wondering as to why this not reported directly to the 13 police.

14 Brian Lehrer: I'd be curious to hear both your answers to that.

15 Sabrina, based on your reporting, can you answer that question?

16 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: Yes, I think there are actually two

17 dimensions to this. One is the way that rape has come to be 18 perceived, which, this is kind of a surprising aspect of my 19 reporting, is that even though we talk about rape as,

20 everybody's anti-rape, everybody talks about it being a very

21 violent crime, but when faced with an actual rape, an actual 22 rape victim, the general public doesn't tend to see it as the 23 serious violent crime that it is. We prefer to see it as some 24 kind of error in judgment, you know, a muddy social faux-pas,

25 and not like a serious crime, and rape victims themselves,

1 because they're in a certain level of denial that something
2 terrible just happened to them, nobody wants to see themselves
3 victimized like that, they will often try to convince themselves 4 that maybe this was not a serious crime that was perpetrated 5 upon them, and I think that has a lot to do with the fact that 6 we are, in the general public, tend to discuss it in this, frame 7 it in those terms. So there is often a delay in calling police, 8 because we're just not framing it in terms of seeing it as a 9 violent crime. But the other dimension to it is that, just as 10 Jed had said earlier, is that police don't have a great track
11 record in terms of pursuing rape reports. I mean, this is kind 12 of the sad reality here, is that in an ideal world, a rape 13 victim would call police, and they would pursue it, and then the 14 prosecutor would prosecute it, and the rapist would go to jail.
15 But in reality, these tend to be very complicated cases that 16 require a certain level of expertise. These are cases that 17 generally, there aren't witnesses, there's generally alcohol 18 involved, and somewhere along the line, law enforcement very 19 often says, we just don't want to deal with this. So I think 20 that better training is going to be necessary in order to, so 21 that rape victims feel like they're in good hands when they go 22 to report to law enforcement.

23 Brian Lehrer: Jed, as a legal expert, and as a faculty member 24 on a campus, what would you add?

25 Jed Rubenstein: Well, two things. It is scary for a victim to 1 go by herself down to the police station. She would have to 2 give her own name, lose confidentiality, she might be treated 3 suspiciously by the police. It will be scary and lonely for her

4 to go to the hospital to get the rape kit processed. Women 5 victims need first of all, we need a retraining of the police, 6 and I'm in touch with police departments in college towns, and 7 they know it. We need to retrain the police so that they are 8 more receptive and treat these claims respectfully, but what I
9 propose in my piece is that college should be sending a lawyer 10 down with that victim down to the police station to encourage 11 her to go down and to make sure her rights are respected, to 12 make sure she's treated appropriately, to make sure that police 13 handle the claim correctly, and then they should send a 14 counselor with her to the hospital to get that rape kit. We 15 need to encourage more victims to report. The second piece of 16 it is, perversely paradoxically, the new college sexual assault 17 procedures offer women and men, victims of sexual assault, a 18 better alternative right now. They keep confidentiality, they 19 get a lower standard of proof, they are treated more 20 respectfully, as of course they should be, and so the vast 21 majority of college sexual assault victims now choose to report 22 to their university,
23 [00:20:00]
24 not the police. Exactly the wrong result, because colleges 25 cannot handle the claims, and their punishments are not

1 sufficient to deter anybody.

2 Brian Lehrer: Tom in Hillsboro, you're on WNYC. Hello.

3 Tom: Yeah, hi. I've been listening to this discussion with 4 some interest. Just very briefly, by background, I was a 5 prosecutor, and I'm now a criminal defense attorney. I disagree
6 fundamentally with many of the premises that are being floated 7 here. Very specifically, not mentioned by your people, is that 8 a lot of allegations of sexual assault to begin with are 9 fraudulent and not accurate. That has been proven demonstrably.
10 That's number one. Number two, the general attitude that's 11 being fronted here is that whenever somebody makes a complaint, 12 that it therefore must be true. There's no disagreement by me 13 that the colleges are not set up to adjudicate these type of 14 allegations. The attitude of both of your people, the law
15 professor and this reporter, about how police and district 16 attorney's offices treat rape allegations, in my experience, is 17 completely wrong, so I think you're really sort of doing a 18 disservice by misrepresenting what actually occurs by 19 exaggerating a problem that probably does exist but is being 20 used for different purposes. I mean, that's sort of my general 21 comments.

22 Brian Lehrer: When you say used for different purposes, what 23 are you accusing who of?

24 Tom: Well, more specifically, for example, there's a woman at 25 Columbia University who, where I actually went to school, who

1 apparently is walking around campus with a mattress as a form of 2 protest of the way her claim was adjudicated within the school 3 system. My understanding of the facts, based on the article in 4 the New York Times was that she had consensual sex with someone, 5 and the issue was that she did not consent to anal sex, but she 6 did consent to traditional sex. That type of case, in my 7 opinion, is not something that anybody could really ever 8 successfully prove. Meanwhile

9 Brian Lehrer: But let me stop you for a second and ask if the 10 main distinction that our guests, particularly Jed Rubenfeld, 11 Yale law professor, is getting at, is that the actual criminal 12 justice system, rather than campus authorities, are better 13 prepared to handle these allegations? Why wouldn't that be true?

14 Tom: No, that is true.

15 Brian Lehrer: - for false allegations as well as true 16 allegations?

17 Tom: It is 100% true. All these claims should be set up in a 18 way through these colleges that have resources, and every 19 college does, to adjudicate the claims correctly and assist the 20 victims. They're not set up now to do that, they're 21 transitioning to do that, so I don't disagree with that, but 22 what I do disagree with is this kind of hysteria that seems to 23 be developing about these issues. I cited to your call screener 24 an example of a case I know of from a college I attended where a 25 victim, alleged victim, showed up over a year later claiming

1 that she now remembered that she had been raped by someone who 2 was an alleged friend. I mean, that case just doesn't have any 3 merit.

4 Brian Lehrer: Tom, thank you for your call. Jed Rubenfeld, 5 what are you thinking, listening to Tom?

6 Jed Rubenstein: Well, I mean

7 Brian Lehrer: Some cases are going to, I'm not even exactly 8 sure of his point, because yes, some cases

9 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: Actually, could, do you mind if I

10 Brian Lehrer: Oh, Sabrina, please.

11 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: I mean, I'd like to say, I mean, he's 12 trying to I believe that one thing he's trying to say is that 13 many of these reports are false, but I'd like to say that that 14 is actually categorically not true. There's been research on 15 this that shows that somewhere between 2 and 8% of rape reports 16 are either false, or what they call "unfounded," meaning that, 17 let's say, 92% of them are actually true. So there's this myth 18 that, you know, all these people are coming forward with these 19 false allegations, but nothing could be further from the truth.
20 These are actually, these are genuine, and I think that this is 21 one of these rape myths that actually tend to keep victims from 22 not reporting, because they think that they're not going to be 23 believed, and that has historically been the case. I think 24 what's different in this cultural moment than ever before is 25 that for the very first time, rape victims are being believed,

1 and that's why we're seeing so much discussion about rape in the 2 military, rape on college campuses, Bill Cosby, it's all coming 3 together right now, because for the first time, we're allowing 4 ourselves to have a general discussion in which we're giving 5 rape victims some credibility.

6 Brian Lehrer: Claire in Brooklyn, you're on WNYC. Hi, Claire.

7 Claire: Hi. Thank you so much for taking my call. I am a,
8 well I just graduated from Columbia with my masters, and I
9 graduated from Georgetown in 2013, and I have more of a comment 10 than a question, but Georgetown doesn't have fraternities, but 11 it is a pretty privileged place, I would say, and we have quite 12 frequent contacts with UVA, and

13 [00:25:00]

14 I kind of wanted to say that, I think while fraternities are 15 maybe a good thing to focus on and a lot of these rules, it 16 seems like there's more environments of privilege and 17 superiority and lack of transparency generally are the problem.
18 I went to also elite boarding school. Most of my family and 19 many of my friends did as well, and someone who's really, really 20 close to me was actually raped in a very similar situation to 21 what the Rolling Stone article describes, but at the age of 14, 22 and at another boarding school, and she didn't report the 23 situation for many of the same reasons that Jackie in the 24 article didn't report, and I'm assuming all of those men went 25 off to elite colleges as well, and many of them would have had

1 the choice to join fraternities, so I just wanted to sort of get 2 comments on sort of cultures that are similar to fraternities 3 and how to sort of prevent that sort of environment from 4 developing in the first place.

5 Brian Lehrer: Yeah, it's well stated and a great question. If 6 this can happen, and we're almost out of time, but Sabrina, if 7 this can happen at Georgetown, which doesn't even have 8 fraternities, she says, just as it could happen at UVA, is there 9 some common culture element that needs to be the focus here, 10 rather than fraternities per se?

11 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: I think she raises a great point. I 12 think that entitlement and narcissism play huge roles in sexual 13 assault, people taking something, feeling entitled to take 14 something that is not theirs, and fraternities have not cornered 15 the market on that, on entitlement and on narcissism. So I 16 think that any culture that holds itself as elite is perhaps 17 prone to this kind of thing, but it's worth saying that, even 18 though I drilled down on University of Virginia, and that's what 19 I focused on, part of the reason why I focused on it is because 20 I felt that it was a culture that was representative of what's 21 going on at a lot of places across the country, so I really 22 can't emphasize this enough, I was not saying that this is only 23 happening at University of Virginia. Just the opposite. I'm 24 saying that what's probably happening at University of Virginia 25 is really what's happening everywhere.

1 Brian Lehrer: Jed, a last thought from you? Because in your 2 article, you do recommend ways to go forward more productively
3 to deal with the problem. What's at the heart of it?

4 Jed Rubenstein: Well, I think we should walk back a little bit.

5 I do not believe, myself, that the problem is correctly
6 described as, we have a "rape culture" in America or on college
7 campuses. Again, the research suggests that over 90% of rapes
8 are committed by 4% or fewer of college men. What we have is a 9 problem of a relatively small number of rapists, serial rapists, 10 we need to do something about them

11 Brian Lehrer: Overrepresented in fraternities? If you know
12 those stats, Jed.

13 Jed Rubenstein: We do have stats that indicate that men in 14 fraternities are more likely to commit sexual assault, and that 15 victims who go to fraternity parties are more likely to be 16 assaulted, but what we need to do is focus our attention on 17 deterring and stopping those, that small number of rapists from 18 committing rapes in the future, not thinking that what we have 19 is a general elite male rape culture so that the entire, we're 20 sort of damning the whole culture and not focusing on the real 21 problem, which is to punish and deter and stop those that are 22 committing these rapes.

23 Brian Lehrer: More punishment of those caught.

24 Jed Rubenstein: More deterrents and more prevention by 25 universities, just, we have to get inside, we have to break the

1 link between all male clubs, like fraternities, alcohol, and the 2 party scene at these colleges. That's not impossible to do, and 3 we have to do it.

4 Brian Lehrer: Jed Rubenfeld, Yale law professor, who had an 5 opinion piece in the New York Times last week called Mishandling 6 Rape, he's also co-author of the book "The Triple Package: How 7 Three Unlikely Traits Explain the Rise and Fall of Cultural 8 Groups in America," and Sabrina Rubin Erdely who wrote the 9 Rolling Stone article on rape at the University of Virginia, 10 which has gone so viral and resulted in just a matter of days in 11 the UVA President suspending all fraternity activity until after 12 Christmas Break. Thank you both very much for coming on with us 13 today.

14 Jed Rubenstein: Thank you.

15 Sabrina Rubin Erdely: Thank you.

16 Brian Lehrer: Brian Lehrer on WNYC. Coming up next, the 17 thousands of New Yorker who took to the streets last night 18 weren't just protesting the death of Michael Brown. We will 19 talk with Brooklyn Borough president and former Police Officer 20 Eric Adams about the fatal police shooting here in New York last 21 of Akai Gurley in a public housing stairwell. We will also get 22 Eric Adams take on Ferguson. Stay with us.
